Principles Into Practice For Learners Who Are DHH:

Key Areas for Leaders and Teams

Principles Into Practice for Learners Who Are DHH

Target Audience: General and Special Educators, itinerant teachers, administrators, related services providers, instructional support personnel, interpreters, and others who support student success

Our Educational Service Center is pleased to offer a professional development in partnership with the OCALI Outreach Center for Deafness and Blindness designed to help teams that support students who are deaf or hard of hearing strengthen support using practical tools and collaborative improvement planning. Grounded in the belief that everyone has a role, this professional learning session focuses on moving principles into practice to improve outcomes for learners who are deaf or hard of hearing. Participants, from paraprofessionals to administrators, will explore key focus areas from the Optimizing Outcomes for Students who are Deaf or Hard of Hearing (NASDSE), use a self-assessment tool to reflect on current practices, and identify actionable next steps. The session also introduces resources to support teams in implementing effective practices.
